Looking for practical resources on how you can put board games into use for successful programs at your library?

Video games are garnering much attention as an outreach tool, come see how the current board game renaissance has provided a wealth of resources that should not be overlooked as a part of your collection. In this hands-on workshop, Author Brian Mayer looks at the inherent value that these modern board games bring, from fostering community in our patrons to strengthening 21st-century skills in our students.

About our Presenter: Brian Mayer is a Library Technology Specialist for the Genesee Valley Educational Partnership as well as an Independent Library Consultant. The focus of his work is on the use of modern board games in school libraries as a way to engage students, build literacy, strengthen social skills and reinforce the curriculum. He has been critical in the growth of the designer games as a resource in school libraries and is the co-author of the book: "Libraries Got Game: Aligned Learning through Modern Board Games" from ALA Editions.
