To successfully address the needs of 21st learners, you need to have the support of a wide-variety of stakeholders who recognize the unique role the school library program plays.

The morning session will deal with Administrators and the Community --- the two most powerful groups of stakeholders. Discover why and how you need to change the approach you have been taking in order to ensure that students get what they need and the school library program thrives.

The afternoon session will look at teachers and students. While not as powerful as the first two, these are the ones you are in contact with on a regular basis. If you haven't been reaching them successfully, chances are you are not connecting with what they need. Take a new approach and reap the results of a program that is valued by everyone.

About our Presenter:

Hilda Weisburg retired on July 1, 2004 as library media specialist having worked at Morristown High School in Morristown, NJ and Sayreville elementary schools and its War Memorial High School. She teaches an online graduate courses at William Paterson University and had taught at Rutgers University. A past president of NJASL (when it was EMAnj), she is the association's delegate to AASL's Affiliate Assembly to which she has served as chair and Region II Director.

Currently, she is on the ALA Literacy Committee and the ALA/CBC (Children's Book Council) Joint Committee. She has served on many AASL committees and is now the chair of the 2010 National Institute (Fall Forum). Along with Ruth Toor, she has written thirteen books for library media specialists, the last being New on the Job: A School Library Media Specialist's Guide to Success, published by ALA Editions. A new book for ALA Editions, Being Indispensable: A School Librarian's Guide to Becoming an Invaluable Building Leader is due out later this year. The duo has been writing and editing The School Librarian's Workshop, since 1980.

Hilda Weisburg has given presentations at AASL and state library media conferences and led staff development workshops for many school districts. In addition, she has been a library media consultant for several New Jersey districts.
