

WEBINAR: ZOTERO: THE FREE POWER TOOL FOR BIBLIOGRAPHIES

Led by Jason Puckett

Wednesday, January 13, 2010

10:00 am – 12:00 pm (2 CEU hours)

Cost: $10

Library research tools have moved not only onto the web, but into the browser software itself. Zotero (<http://www.zotero.org/>) is a free Firefox add-on that allows students and researchers to save citations and create bibliographies. It is as easy to learn and use as iTunes and more powerful than commercial competitors like EndNote and RefWorks. New features such as online storage and shared libraries help researchers collaborate online.

Open source browser plug-ins like Zotero can help library users at every stage of the research cycle, from search and discovery to writing and citation. By using free, open source tools, libraries can offer assistance and resources with little cost and foster skills that patrons can use throughout life.

Participants will learn to:

- * identify some of the advantages of using open-source software tools in library research
- * install the Zotero plugin for Firefox
- * save citations and build a personal citation library
- * synchronize your Zotero library and access it from any computer running Firefox
- * automatically generate bibliographies
- * share references and collaborate using Zotero's new groups feature

Intended Audience: Librarians who assist researchers, students and anyone else needing to save citations and create bibliographies.
