

WEBINAR: ID THEFT AND YOUR DIGITAL FOOTPRINT

Led by Robert Lackie

Tuesday, January 26, 2010

2:00 pm – 4:00 pm (2 CEU hours)

Cost: $10

Learn how to protect your personal information, and help library customers do the same.

More and more, our personal information is "out there". Yet according to a Pew Internet "Digital Footprints" Report, only 38% of adults online say they have taken steps to limit the amount of online information that is available about them... How can you protect your private information, and help educate library customers to protect their information?

In this webinar, Robert Lackie will provide practical strategies for hiding your digital footprint and preventing others from obtaining your personal information.

About the Presenter: Robert J. Lackie is a Professor-Librarian at Rider University in New Jersey, where he co-leads the course-integrated Library Instruction Program and serves as Reference Collection Development Librarian. A frequent presenter at local, state, and national library, education, and technology conferences, Professor Lackie has presented over 500 workshops and seminars around the United States, and he has been published within various professional and scholarly works. His co-edited book, Teaching Generation M: A Handbook for Librarians and Educators, was published in June 2009.
